

Sl[i]stem – Job board Presentation & workflow

Previous job board

Previous job board issues

The job board directly accessing Slistem database was a major issue:

 - Updating the database software implies an update of the job board code

 - Changing the database structure for Slistem implies an update of the job board code

 - Changing the job board requires an update of Slistem database

 - Maintenance on Slistem or its database was making the job board stop working

 - Slistem had to share the same hardware / server with the job board

As a result, it was a software really hard to maintain, and was getting in the way of Slistem evolution.

Slate's new job board

New job board

It's a way more advanced and stable structure:

- ✓ - Slistem and the job board are independent softwares / databases (apps, database, servers, users... nothing is tightly linked)
- ✓ - No more issues with updates, software evolution, maintenance. Systems are running even if one or multiple parts of the chain is broken
- ✓ - There's now a standard & secured XML API for those sites to communicate
- ✓ - The positions are translated and moderated to fit the web environment
- ✓ - The content put on the job board is optimized for search engines (seo, keywords, ...) The JB contains specific options that are not related to Slistem and consultant's job
- ✓ - The positions can easily be pushed on social networks. Managing the social networks and community is a specific tasks for the moderator
- ✓ - Slistem database security is improved, and server load controlled. No access due to public activities, Slistem database is restricted to Slate users only
